suspending the regulations for carrying on Chinese emigration from Macao for one year was about to expire, and there were several. well-known and influential coolie traders already on the spot, eager to take advantage of the reopening unless its prchibition by the Portuguese Government were renewed. Lord DERBY thereupon wrote to Mr. COBBOLD transmitting copies of the despatches of Sir. BROOKE ROBERTSON and Sir ARTHUR KEN-NEDY, and desiring him to express to the Portuguese Foreign Minister the confidence felt by Hor Majesty's Government that the Government of Portugal were sincere in their desire to pro int the resumption of the Coolis the same time to draw the attention of the Lisbon Government to the fact that the suspension of the Regulations for the coolie traffic would expire on the 1st April, and urge the propriety of their sending instructions upon the subject at once by telegraph to Macao. A reply was received from Mr-Connorm on the 22nd April enclosing a letter from Senhor Corvo, in which he stated that the new Governor of Macao had been furnished with instructions to prohibit, until further orders, emigration under contract, as well as all free emigration. Such is the history of the latest tetempts to revive the Coolie Traffic, and their failure through the watchful care of British officials, and the willing and courteous compliance of the Portuguese Government with the suggestions offered. THE suggestion made by "Inquirer" in Saturday's issue that inquiries should be made into the origin of fires is a sonsible one. There is, as he remarks, no reason why the causes of catastrophes of that nature should not, fined 50 cents. equally with shipwrecks and such disasters be investigated. The majority of fires origiunte in simple carelessness. Same, and it is to be hoped a very few, are intentional, caused for the purpose of concealing insolvency and of obtaining the insurance money. Others arise from spontaneous combustion among goods stored, or from a bond fide accident. But no matter what the origin may be, it should in the interests of the public be laid bare if possible. Much good would result from such publicity. The careless would be taught cantion, the ill-disposed would have a salutary dread of the investigation to follow their against many possible sources of conflagra-New York...... Messrs. S. M. Now this savage tragedy and absurdly mild nanishment are the result of that antagonism between the military men and the civilians which still characterises Russian life and of Russian military views about duelling. The original cause of quarrel or rather the pretext, was a miserable question of a chair for a lady at a ball. The two men had long bated each other, and the civilian seems to have been in the habit of saying bitter things about war and officers. Explanations followed the balk scene, and the affair seemed ended, the judge disclaiming offence. Karpoff then is told that Kozinenko goes about wit dog said to have frightened him, Karpoff, out demanding satisfaction at the late interriew. This report leads to a scens in a public garden, during which the officer-gives the li lirect, and receives a blow on the cheek. ourse a duel must follow. It appears that Kozinenko never really refused to fight, but that Karpoff, through the fault of one of the seconde, thought he did, These decails are unimportant. The officers sign a round robin exonerating Karnoff from all stain on his conour, and the cylidence shows him to have been studious, quiet living promising officer; ve ie believes that his honour requires him to murder Kozinenko, and those-in-command-over him evidently thought that he could not net otherwise. An official account has been published of the naval amack by the British squadron, under Captain Sulivan, of the London, senior officer here, on Mombasah, a fortress in the dominions of the Sultan of Zinzibar. Mombasah, or Mombaga, stands on a small island, 180 miles northward of Zanzibar. Its Governor, Akida Mohammed Vir Abdullah, an Arab of high rank, received an order in August last to execute another Arab, a friend of his, from the and try to make it up with him, remembering having become obnoxious to the Sultan. Akida refused, and was therefore ordered to resign his command and repair to Zanzibar... Under such a despotic Government his compliance with this secondorder would have led to his own execution. Akida, therefore, determined to hold the fortress against his master. The Sultan had no force with which he could attempt the reduction of the fortress. Akida remained in possession, and to support his troops, about 400 soldiers he has since made various raids on the adjacent country, and frequent fights have occurred between his troops and those of the Sultan. In these conflicts some wealthy and influential traders belonging to a nutive race of India, called Banyans, British subjects, have suffered. To put an end, therefore, to this inconvenience to them. Captain Priceaux, of the Bombay Staff Corps, the acting Political Agent bere, applied to Captain Sulivan to put down the insurrection. The force employed was the Nassau, surveying vessel; the Rifleman, double sevew gun vessel; and the London, The Nassau's and the Rifleman's cutters were used as rocket boats. The fortress had 45 guns, the obsolete 18-pounders. The naval force had a 7-inch 64-ton gun, seven 20-pounder Armstrong guns, and the rocket boats. On being summoned to surrender, Abdullah said it was too great an honour to meet the British under arms for him to think of surrendering without exchanging a shot with them. In the bombardment that followed be had 17 of his soldiers killed and 50 wounded. The British force had neither killed nor woulded. On the ultimate surrender, after three bours" bombardment, Akida, with his brother and some of his principal followers, were taken on board the Nassas-us-prisoners-under British protection. The rest of the garrison, with their women and children, have been sent to Muscat.

> ALLEGED MURDER OF A BISHOP, The Armenian bishop of Khiry, a small town | this Climate. near Erzinghian, has, according to an Erzeroum sorrespondent, died under mysterious circumstances. He had been invited to dine with a Obvistion notable of his diocese, and found bimself at the repast in the company of a Tur rish scribe with whom he was at enmity. Late at night, the bishop was carried bome lifeless. and it was said be bad died in a drunken fit. A servant of the deceased prelate, however, repaired to Erzeroum and affirmed before the ili that his master had been mardered. Be fore dinner, he said, high words arose between the bishop and the scribe, but the other guests interfered and succeeded in appearing them. Later in the evening the kintib sought again to provoke the bishop, and the quarrel was renewed. In the beight of the contest the kiatib the bishop. When the candles were relighted COLLARS and BEADED FIGHUS. the latter had already ceased to breathe. This story produced great excitement at Erzeroum, and the governor-general, who enjoys the reputation of being a just man, has ordered that he body of the alleged victim should be brough o that city and examined, promising, if it should be found to exhibit any traces of violence o bring the murderer to account.—Globe.

In the Cornhill, Mr. Francis Doyle renders, from the French of Theorhile Cautier, the following poem, entitled "Secret Affinities: a Pontheistic Fantasy: "-"Deep in the vanished time, two statues white, On an old temple's front, against blue glenns

SECRET AFFINITIES.

- Of an Athenian eky, instinct with light, Blended their marble dreams. In the same shell embedded (crystal tears Of the sad sea mourning her Venus flown), Two pearls of loneliest occan, through long years,
- Kept whispering words unknown. In the fresh pleasaunce, by Grunada's river, Close to the low-voiced fountain's silver showers, Two roses, from Boabdil's garden, ever Mingled their naurmuring flowers.
- Upon the domes of Venice, in a nest Where love, from age to age, has bad his day, Two white doves, with their feet of pink, found rest Through the soft month of May.
- Dove, rose, pearl, marble, into suin dim Alike dissolve themselves, alike decay: Pearls melt, flowers wither, marble shapes dislima, And bright birds float away.
- Each element, once free, flies back to feed The unfathomable Life-dust, yearning dumb, Whenco God's all-shaping hands in silence kneed Each form that, is to come.
- The marble softens down its flawless grain; The rose, in lips as sweet and red and fresh; Refigured, blooms again. The doves once more muranur and coo beneath The hearts of two young lovers, when they meet;

By slow, slow change, to white and tender flesh

- The pearls renew themselves, and flush as teeth Through smiles divinely sweet. Hence sympathetic emanations flow,
- And with soft tyranny the heart conirol; Touched by them, kindred spirits hears to know Their aisterhood of soul.
- Obedient to the hint some fragrance sends, Some color, or some ray with mystic power, Atom to atom never swerving tends. As the bee seeks her flower.
- If monlight visions round the tomple shed, Of lives linked in the sea, a memory wakes, Of flower-falk flushing through the petals red Where the bright fountain breaks.
- cicare and wings that shivered to the kiss. On golden domes afor, come back to rain Sweet influence; Faithful to remembered bliss, The old love stire again.
- Forgotien presences shine forth, the past le for the visionary eye unscaled; The breathing flower, in crimson lips recast, Lives, to herself revealed.
- Where the laugh plays a glittering mouth within, The pearl reclaims her lustre softly bright: The marble throbs, fused in a maiden skin As fresh, and puret and white.
- Under some low and gentle voice the dove Has found an echo of her tender moan: Resistance grows impossible, and love Springs up from the unknown.
- Oh! thou whom burning, trembling, I adore, What shrine, what see, what dome, what rose-lie
- law us, as mingling, marble, joined of yorc, As pearl, or bird, or flower?"

The name of the late Sir Jamsetice stood for more than a score of years at the very head of the list of merchant-princes and shipowners in Bombay, where he was born, and where his ancestors for many generations resided. He came of an old and wealthy family, who trace their genealogy back to the Parsec exedus-of-the eight century; and it is said that the "sacred fire" has never once during all that time burned out upon their altar. Sin Jamsetice himself, though probably faithful in the observance of the actual requirements of his creed, was assuredly less strict than the majority; and being a man of large intellect, cultivated mind and great independence of character, he did not hesitate to borrow from other nations any customs, institutions or inventions that might tend to the improvement of his own people. His stately mansion was built and furnished in European style; his children, even his daughters, were carefully educated in foreign as well as native lore; and his own associations were with refined and cultivated people, without any regard to their nation or creed. than we should deem quite in accordance purpose; and I have still in my cabinet cause simplicity to become "good style," with good taste. > A CURIOUS OLD CUSTOM. When criminals ceased to be executed at the Elms in Smithfield, or, as some say, at a. much earlier date, a gallows was set up near the north-west corner of the hospital; and it soon became a regular custom to present every malefactor, as he passed the hospital gate in the fatal cart on his way to the gallows, with a glass of ale. When the hospital was dissolved, the oustom was still kept up; and there is scarcely an execution at "Tyburn still preserved by Bowl Yard or Alley, on the south side of the High-street, "over against Dyott-street, now Georgestreet;" and Parton, in his "History of the Parish," published in 1822, makes mention of a public house bearing the sign of "The Bowl," which stood beneath the end of St. Giles's, High-street, and Hog-lane. "A like custom," writes Pennant, "obtained anciently at York which gave rise to the saying, that the saddler of Bawtry was hanged for leaving his liquor: had he stopped. as was usual with other criminals, to drink his bowl of ale, his reprieve, which was actually on its way, would have arrived in time enough to have saved his life." The "Bowl" would appear to have been succeeded by the "Angel," or to have had a rival in that inn. At all events, in 1873, the City Press reported that another memorial of ancient London was about to pass away. namely, the "Angel" Inn, at St. Giles's, the "half-way house" on the road to Tyburnthe house at which Jack Ketch and the criminal who was about to expiate his offence on the scaffold were wont to stop on their way to the gallows for a "last glass."
